Road traffic crashes kill nearly 1.3 million people every year and injure or disable as many as 50 million more.

They are the leading cause of death among young people aged 10–24 years. In October 2005, the United Nations General Assembly adopted a resolution which calls for governments to mark the third Sunday in November each year as World Day of Remembrance for Road Traffic Victims. The day was created as a means to give recognition to victims of road traffic crashes and the plight of their relatives who must cope with the emotional and practical consequences of these tragic events.
