WELCOME BACK

The author of a new UNICEF report says that more than 600 million children in South Asia will see their life prospects diminished over the coming months unless urgent action is taken.

According to the document, "immunization, nutrition and other vital health services have been severely disrupted, potentially threatening the lives of up to 459,000 children and mothers over the next six months."

Speaking to Vatican Radio following its publication, the report's author, Simon Ingram said that although it has been apparent for some time that the scale of the pandemic was having a devastating effect on a number of vital services affecting children, "what came as much more of a surprise was the speed with which the economic meltdown in the region, brought on by COVID-19, had on families."

He noted that very rapidly following the outbreak, families were unable to feed themselves, and in many cases could not afford medical care for their children. The true extent of the situation is now becoming apparent with the very real risk that "another 120 million children are being pushed into poverty over the coming months", he said.

Food insecurity is on the rise, according to the report, especially in countries such as Bangladesh where some of the poorest families are unable to afford three meals a day.

However, Mr Ingram underlined that for countries in South Asia this dramatic situation, "is really across the boards." He pointed to Afghanistan which already has pre-existing problems, such as malnutrition and an ongoing conflict.

Cemetery Sunday

We will not be able to have Cemetery Sunday on 26th of July in the Relic as we had hoped.

Hopefully we will be able to have Cemetery Sunday later in the Year. Please contact your families and let them know about the change, and families with plots beside your own who have no relatives.
