The Holy Father recalled that in Indonesia, Christians are about 10%, and Catholics about 3%, of the population. "But what I encountered is a lively, dynamic Church, capable of living and transmitting the Gospel in that country, which has a very noble culture inclined to harmonize differences, and at the same time has the largest Muslim presence in the world." "Faith, fraternity, compassion' was the motto of the visit to Indonesia," he said. "Through these words, the Gospel enters every day, in a concrete way, into the lives of those people, embracing and offering them the grace of Jesus, who died and rose again."
